CEBU PROVINCIAL PESO 2016

Primary Goal

To deliver efficient and effective employment and its related services to all Cebuanos stakeholders, and residents from other provinces.

Executive Summary

The PESO, under the office of the Cebu Provincial Governor, became operational with the signing of MOA on August 20, 1992, PESO Capitol targets six Job Fairs per year (3 Overseas and 3 Local) with the participation of SSS, NSO, PHILHealth, DFA, NBI, IBP and a Medical Team for value-added services. Aside from the Core Services, special services such as Job Fairs, SPES, SRAs and Outplacement Program are being implemented.

Some innovative services such as the Valedictorians' and Salutatorians' Scholarship Programs for the entire Cebu Province are implemented. To date the programs have already produced graduates who each received cash incentives from the Cebu Provincial Government. Many of them are now gainfully employed, notably in the academe and in the BPOs.

The Livelihood Programs conducted by TESDA-trained PESO Staff paved the way for self-employment and entrepreneurial activities in the different municipalities of Cebu Province.

The Outplacement Program has been established to help those who have been retrenched/dismissed from the services be they from the private or government sector.

The strength of the Cebu Provincial PESO can be gauged by the number of SRAs conducted every month and by the support and cooperation of the different sectors of our society.

REFERRAL & PLACEMENT

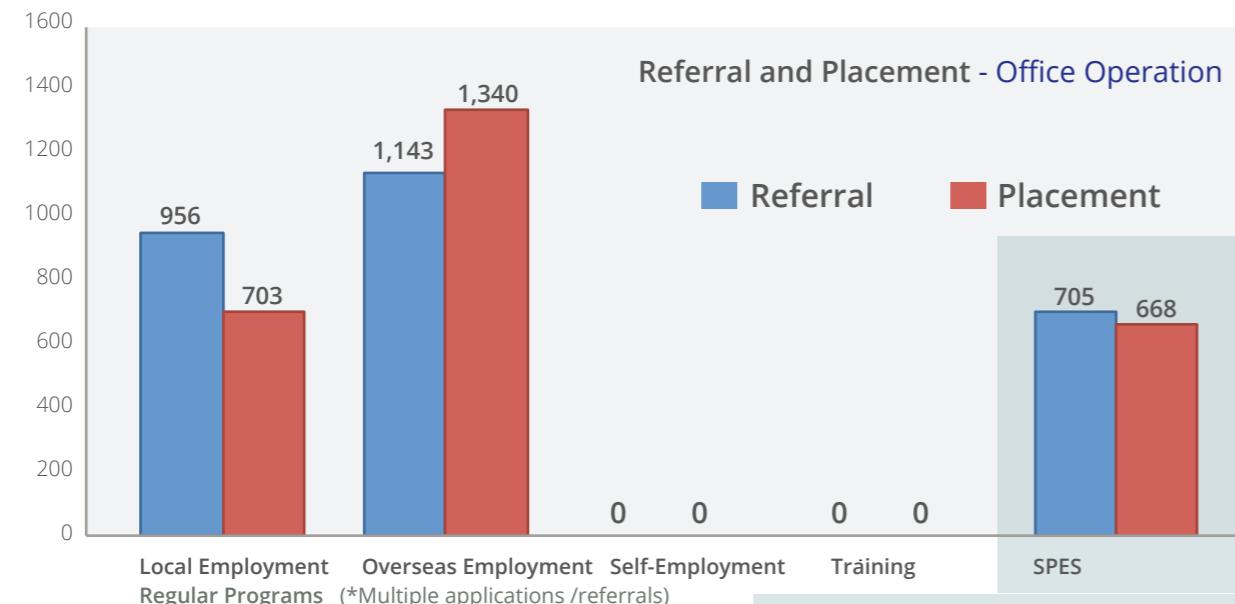

PESO has succeeded in inviting 21,709 job applicants to its different job fair operations and daily referrals in the office. Of this, 1,136 companies and industries were involved. The data showed that there were more applicants in April and in October due to the new graduates entrance to the labor force during the first (October) and second (March) semester. The findings also revealed that in this period the PESO assisted more applicants and clients in the daily operations in the office than during the conduct of job fairs.

LABOR MARKET INFORMATION

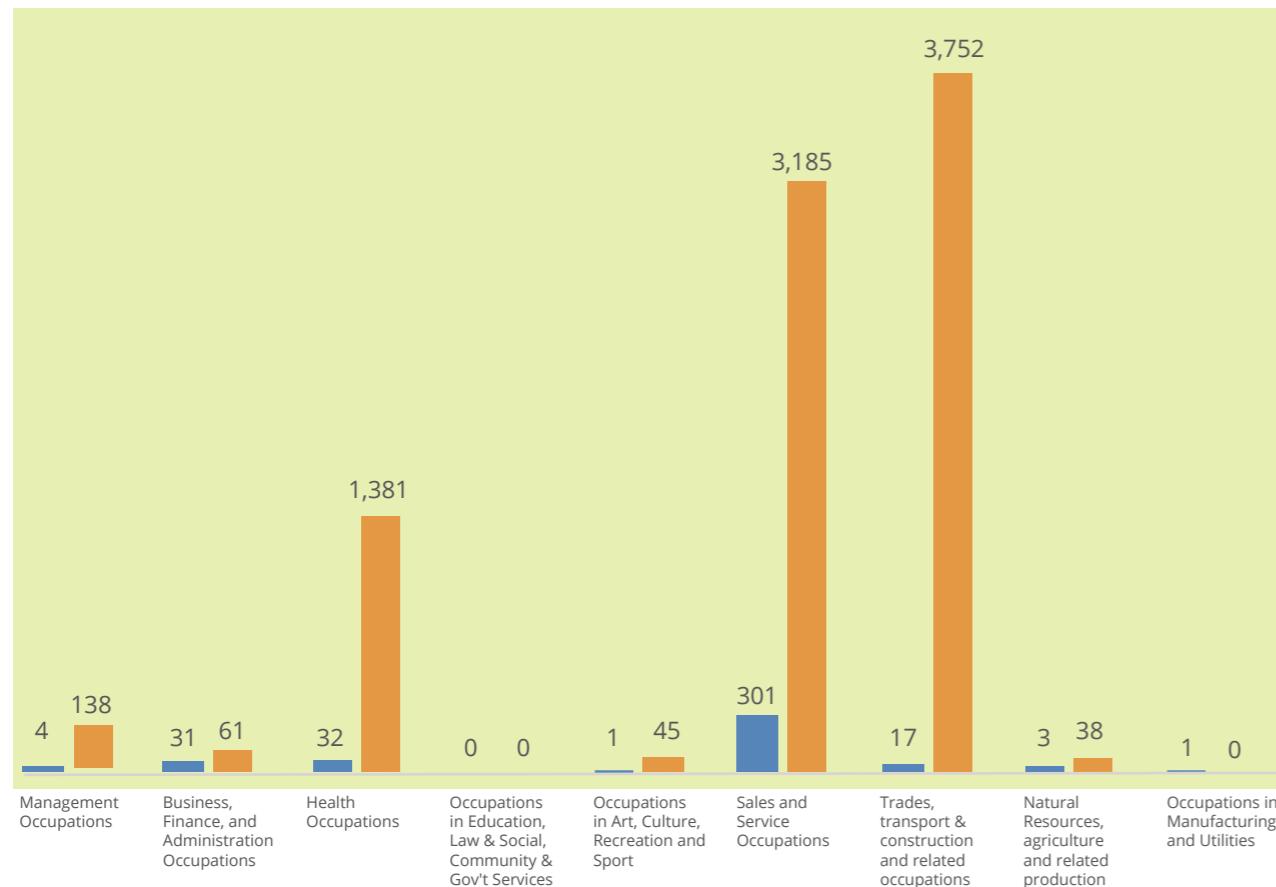

One of the functions of PESO is to solicit job vacancies from both local and overseas companies and agencies. A total of 166,148 job openings were solicited for CY 2016. Obviously, there were more overseas employment vacancies than the local market and these vacancies are about eight times more than the number of applicants. It can be implied that the less number of hired applicants means less are also qualified for the positions. It can be gleaned that the supply did not match with the demands of the labor market, especially the hard-to-fill jobs.

For the local market, Sales and Service Occupations have the highest number of vacancies for Employment while Trades, Transport & Construction Occupations have the highest number of vacancies for Overseas Employment

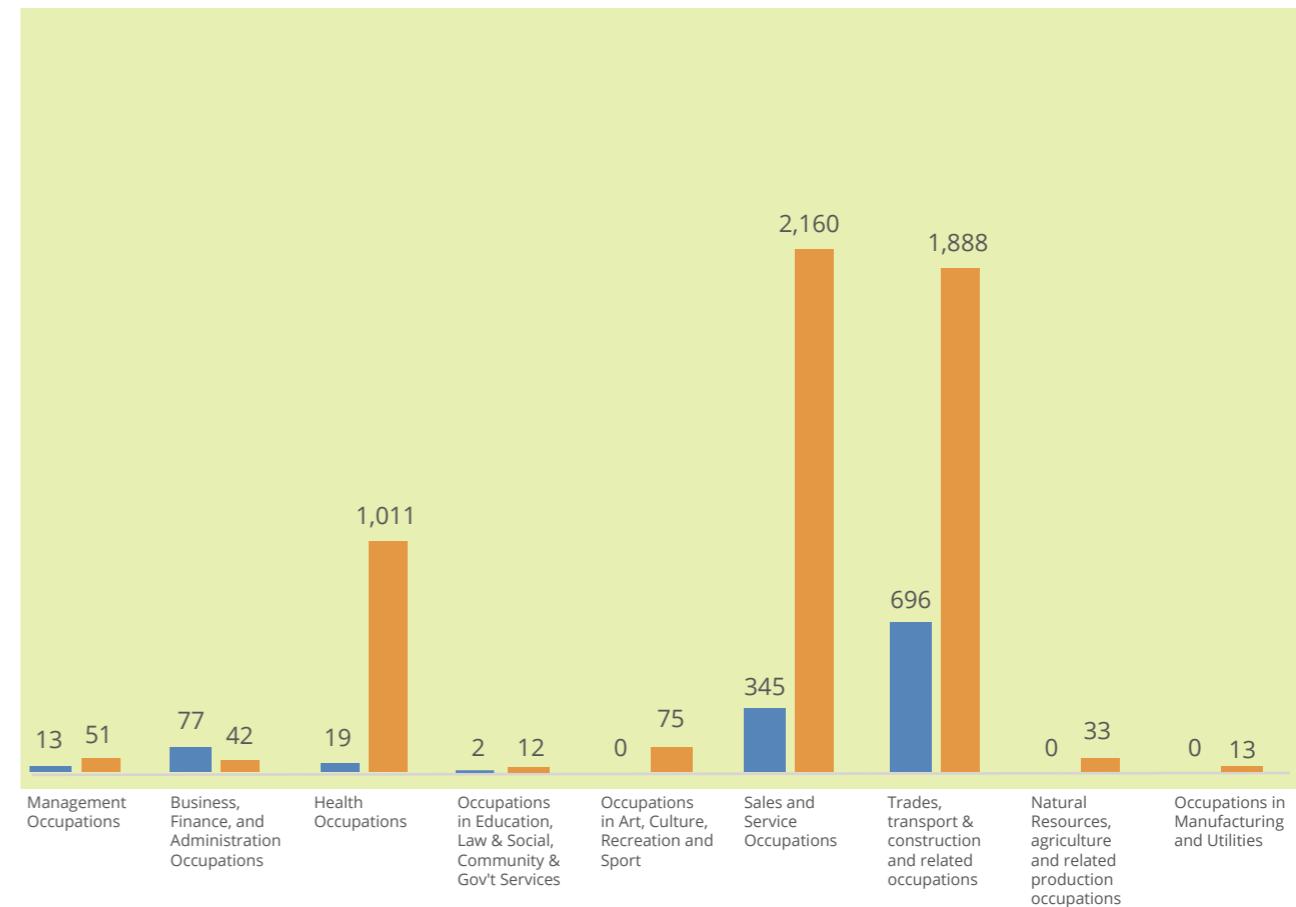

MONTHLY LABOR MARKET INFORMATION STATISTICAL ANALYSIS

January 2016

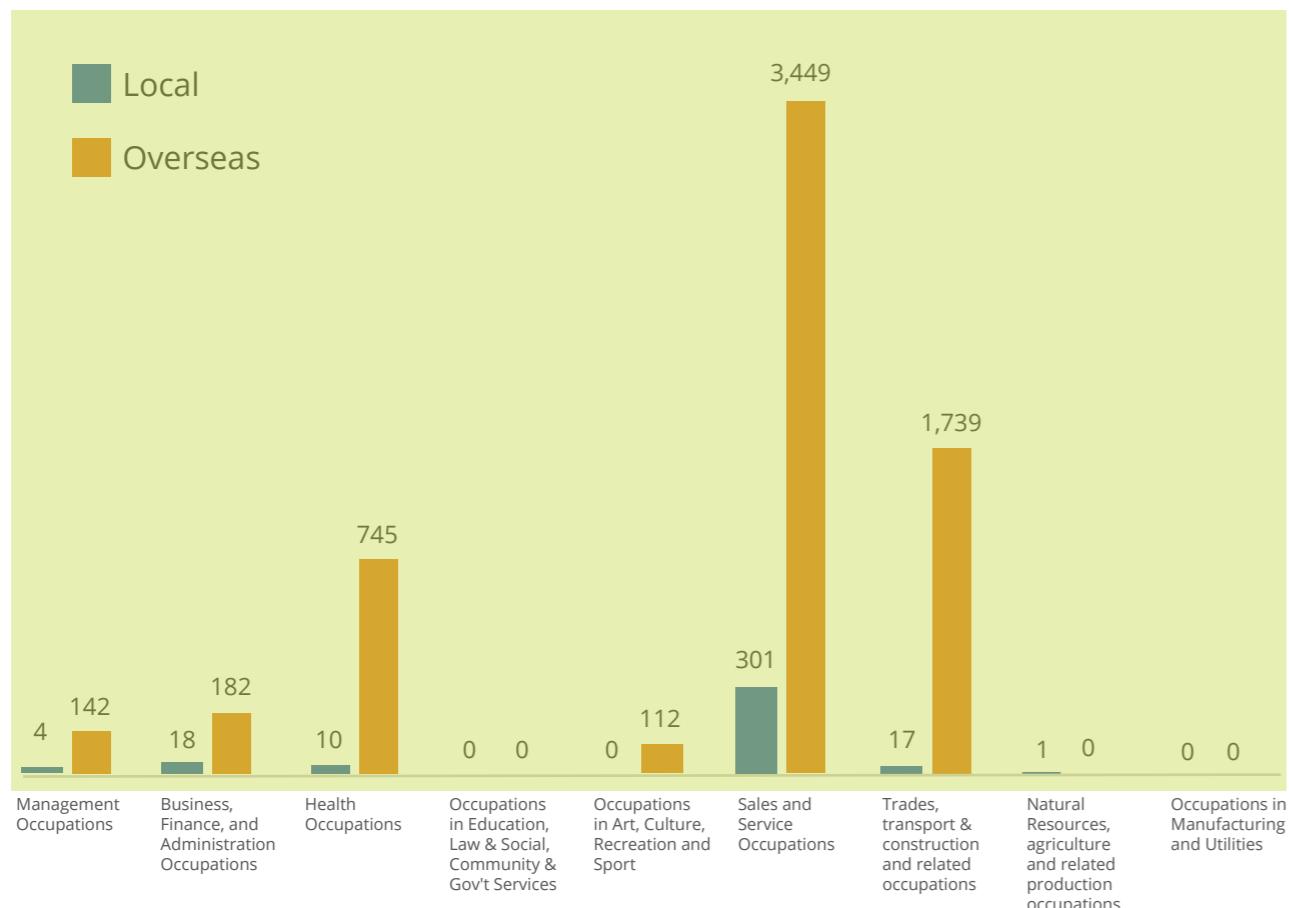

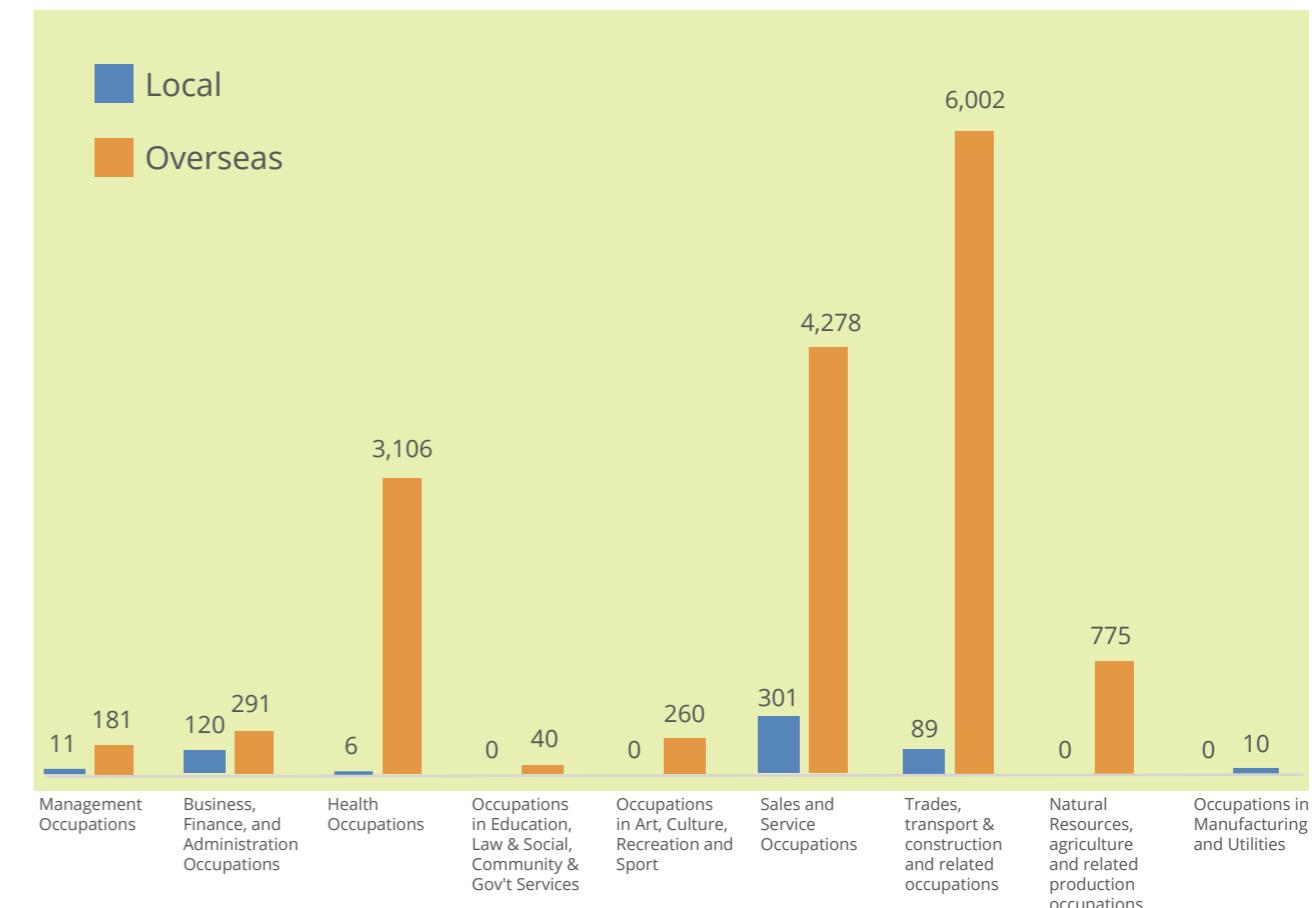

In January the top two highest skills in the overseas labor market are those related to trade, transport and construction followed by sales and service occupations. Many foreign countries are in need of carpenters, welders, fitters and those related in bulding construction or furniture companies. Service occupations includes the domestic helpers and factory workers. It is sad to note that not one teacher, lawyer or social worker applied in January. Graduation would still be in March, and maybe previous graduates are not well informed about these job vacancies.

February 2016

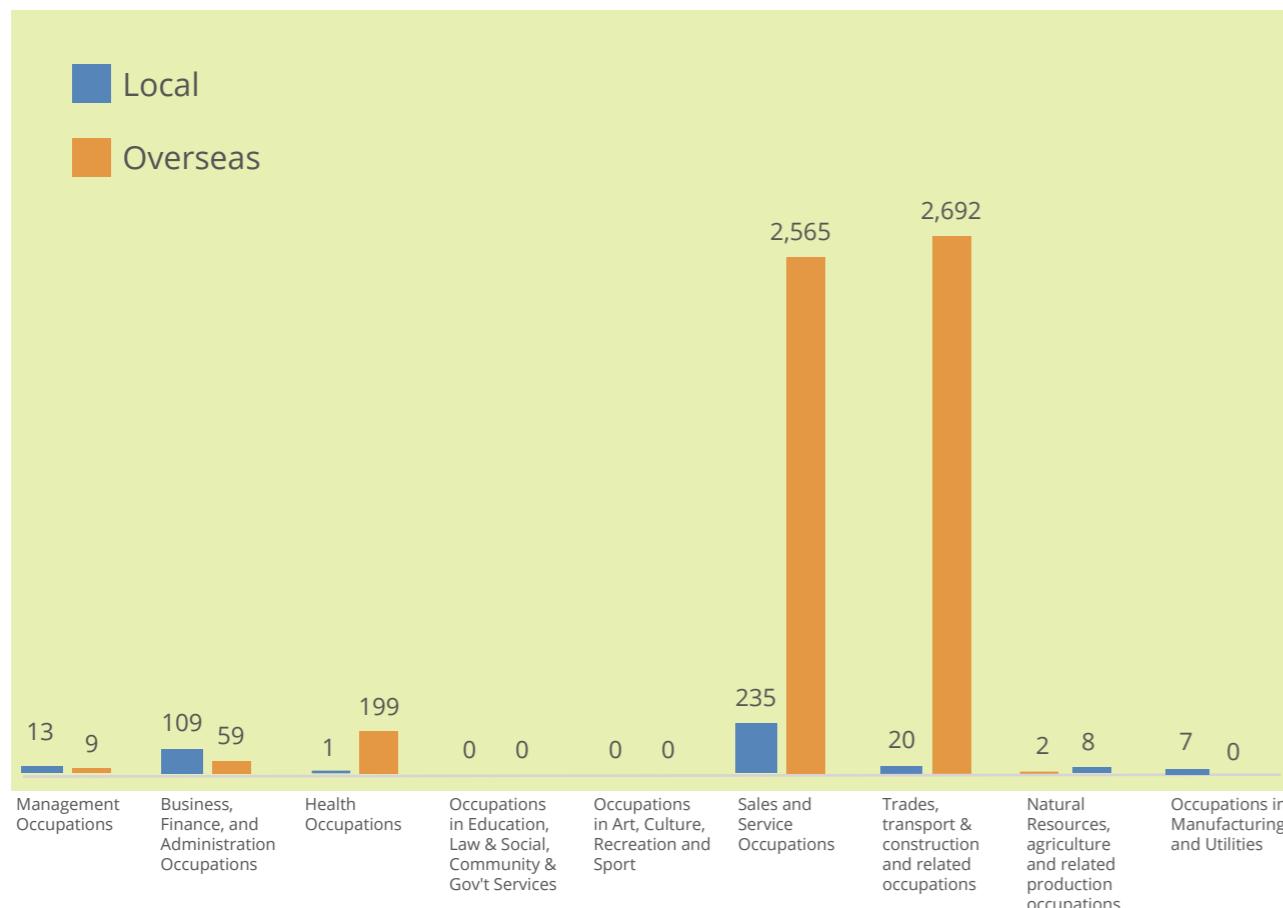

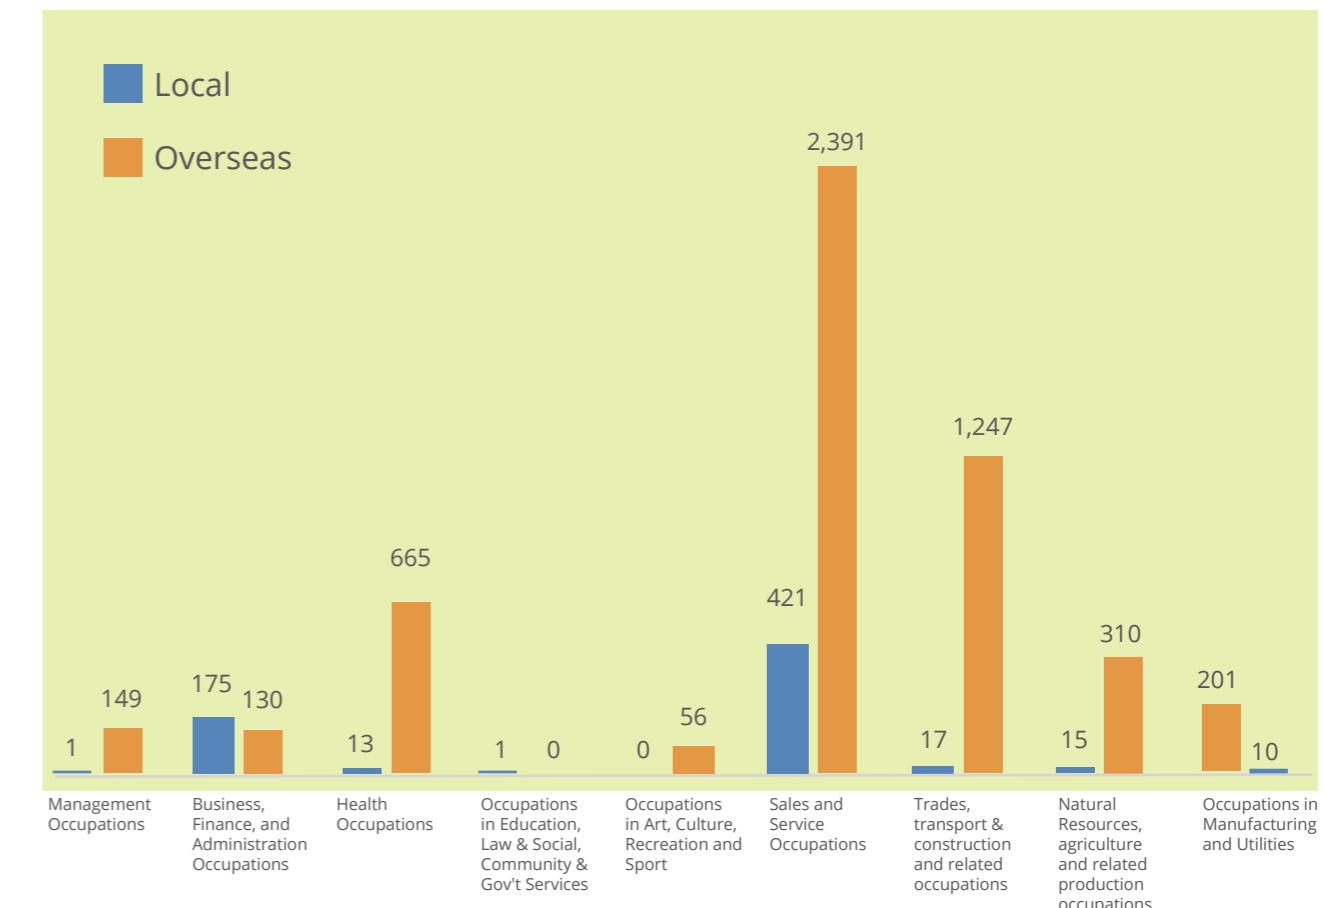

The same trend was observed in the month of February. But this time, there were already applicants in education, and manufacturing, even if still they are the lowest two. Health occupations was still in the third rank withbut a little bit lesser than the last month. These are the nurses and caregivers who really wanted to try their luck abroad. It can also be noted that local vacancies does not include occupations for art, culture, sports and agriculture. This could be attributed to less college graduates for these occupations. Compared to the previous month, the total number of applicants decrease by about 28% (n=2553) maybe because many companies have already hired from the previous month.

March 2016April 2016

The same trend was observed in March. Again, there were no applicants in education, and manufacturing, even if still they are the lowest two. Health occupations was still in the third rank withbut a liwhich decreased by about 30% in number from the previous month. These are the nurses and caregivers who really wanted to try their luck abroad. Again local vacancies do not include occupations for art, culture, sports and agriculture. This could be attributed to less college graduates for these occupations. Compared to the previous month, the total number of applicants were comparable.

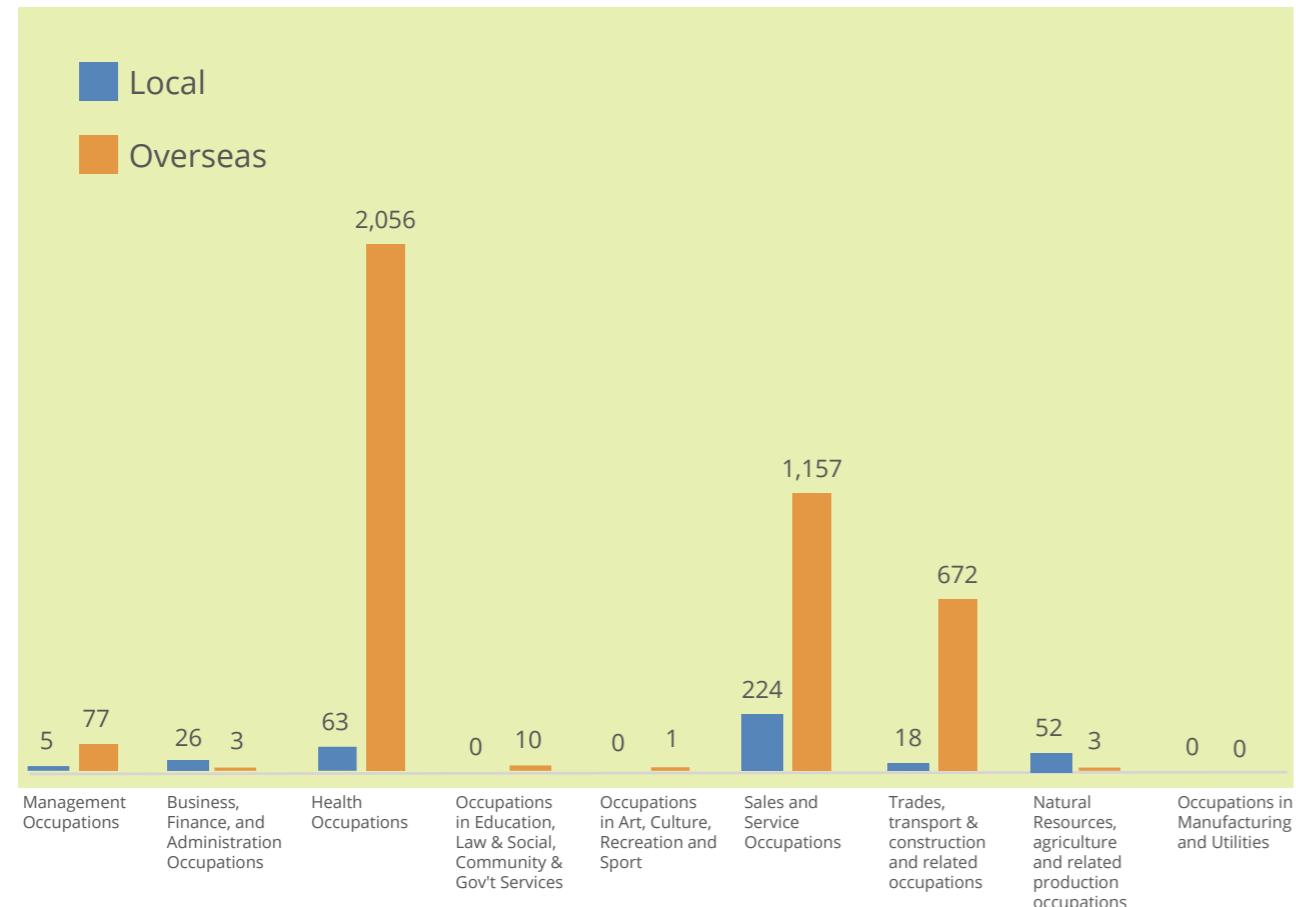

In April, the total number of applicants almost tripled than the previous month. The same trend was observed in March with sales and service occupations in the first rank. . Again, there were less applicants in education, and manufacturing, even if still they are the lowest two. But there were no local applicants. Health occupations was still in the third rank which increased by about 50% in number from the previous month. The increase could be attributed to new graduates in March. Again local vacancies do not include occupations for art, culture, sports and agriculture. Compared to the previous month, April has the highest number of applicants.

May 2016June 2016

The month of May has the second lowest number total number of applicants. The same trend was observed in April with sales and service occupations in the first rank. Again, there were no applicants in education, and manufacturing, even if still they are the lowest two. But there were no local applicants. Health occupations was still in the third rank which decreased by about 200% in number from the previous month. The decrease could be attributed to more hiring in March and there was no more demand in April. Again local vacancies do not include occupations for art, culture, sports and agriculture.

The month of June has the lowest number total number of applicants. The same trend was observed in April and June with sales and service occupations in the first rank. Again, there were no applicants in education, and manufacturing, even if still they are the lowest two. But there were no local applicants. Health occupations was still in the third rank which was comparable to the previous month in number. Again local vacancies do not include occupations for art, culture, sports and agriculture. As noted with the previous months management occupations usually register over a hundred in number but more for overseas.

July 2016

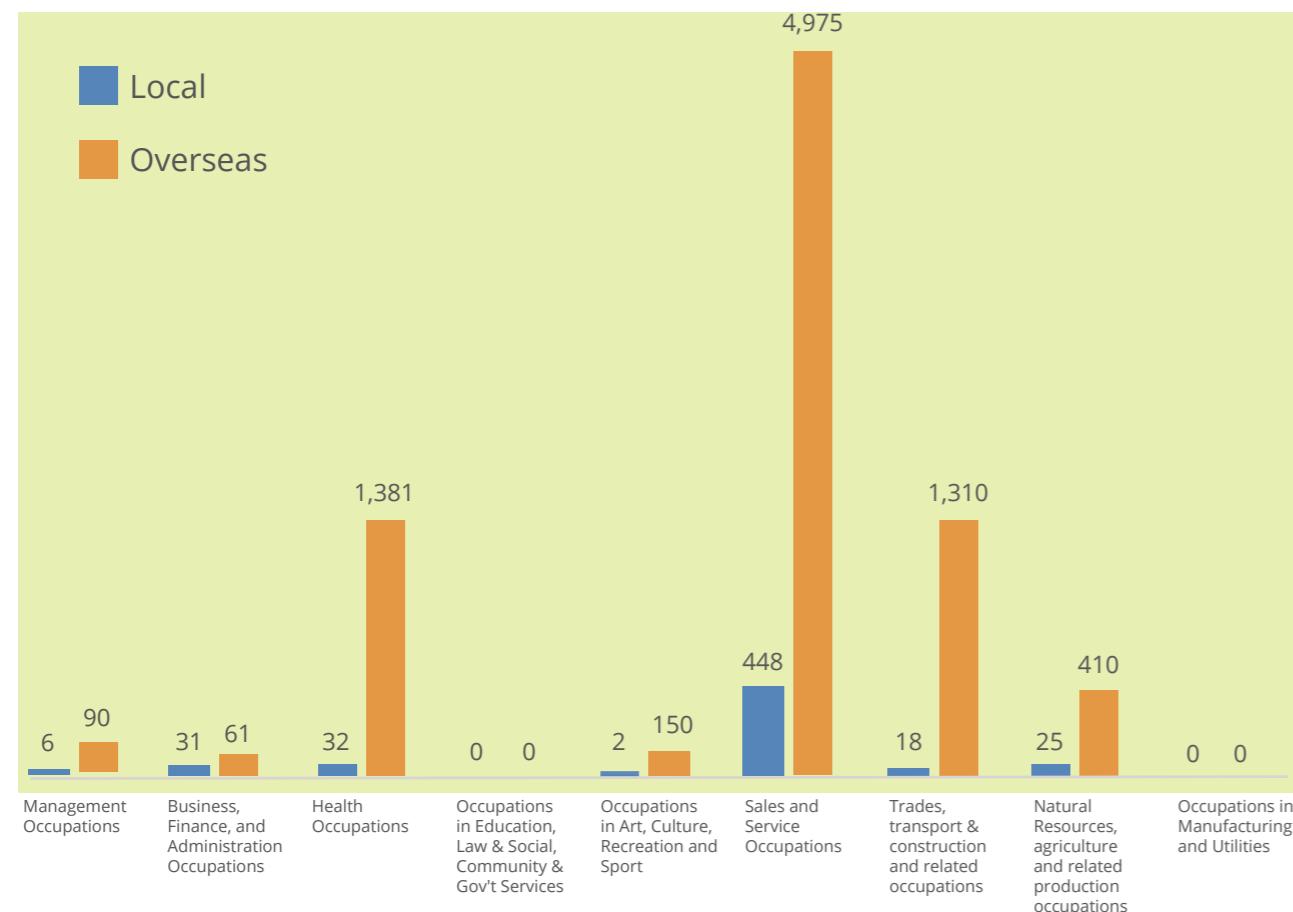

August 2016

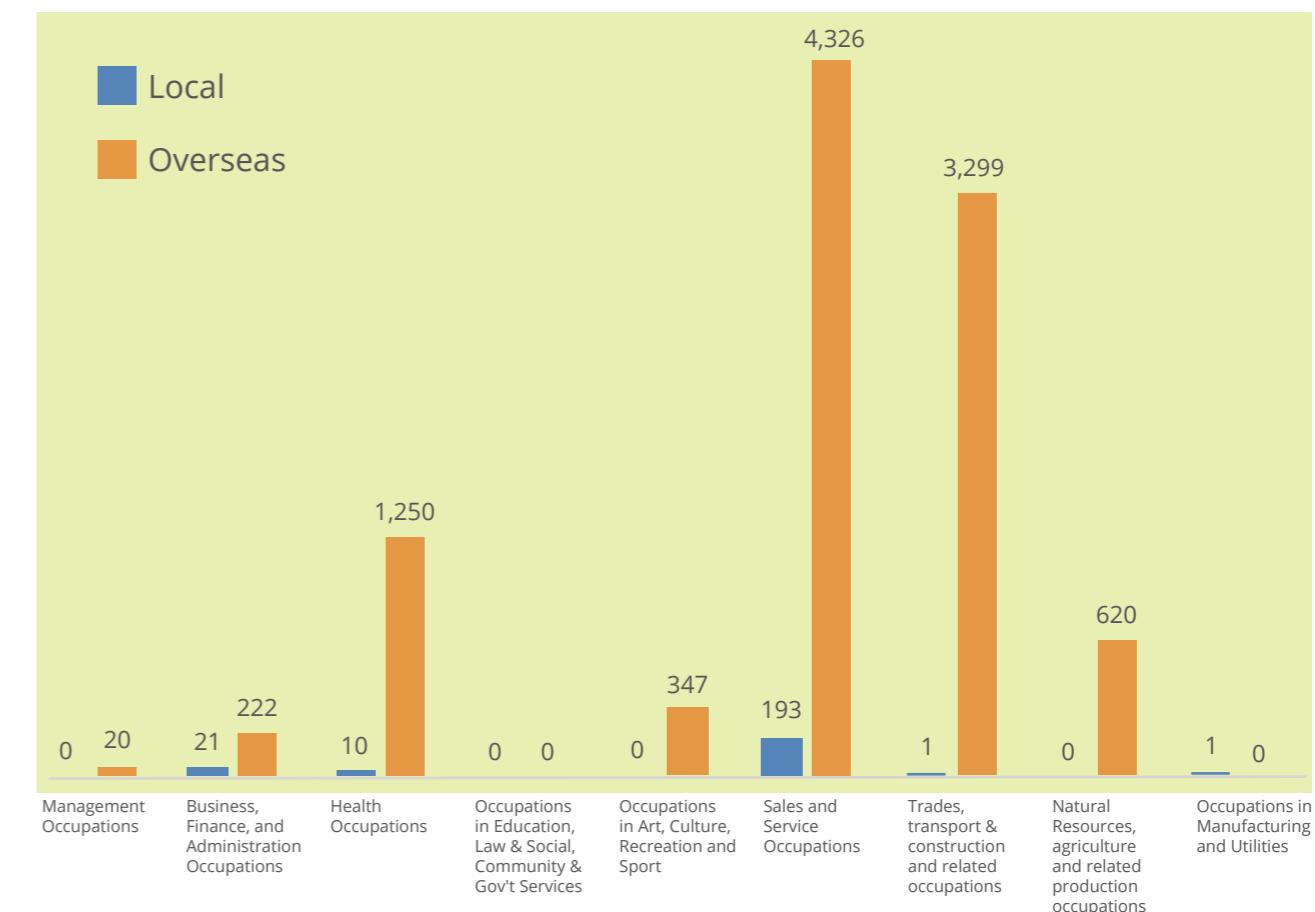

The month of July twist the trend with health occupations in the first rank increasing the demand by 150% from the previous month. Although this was still followed by sales and service then trade and transport as usual. Again, there were no applicants in education, and manufacturing, even if still they are the lowest two. But there were no local applicants. Again local vacancies do not include occupations for art, culture, sports and agriculture. As noted there were applicants for education for overseas.

The month of August registered the second highest number for the year 2016. This time sales was again in top but health occupations ranked second. This was still followed by sales and service then trade and transport as usual. Surprisingly, , there were applicants in education, and manufacturing, and education both in local and overseas but still they are in the lower ranks. This month revealed vacancies for all the nine occupational classifications.

September 2016

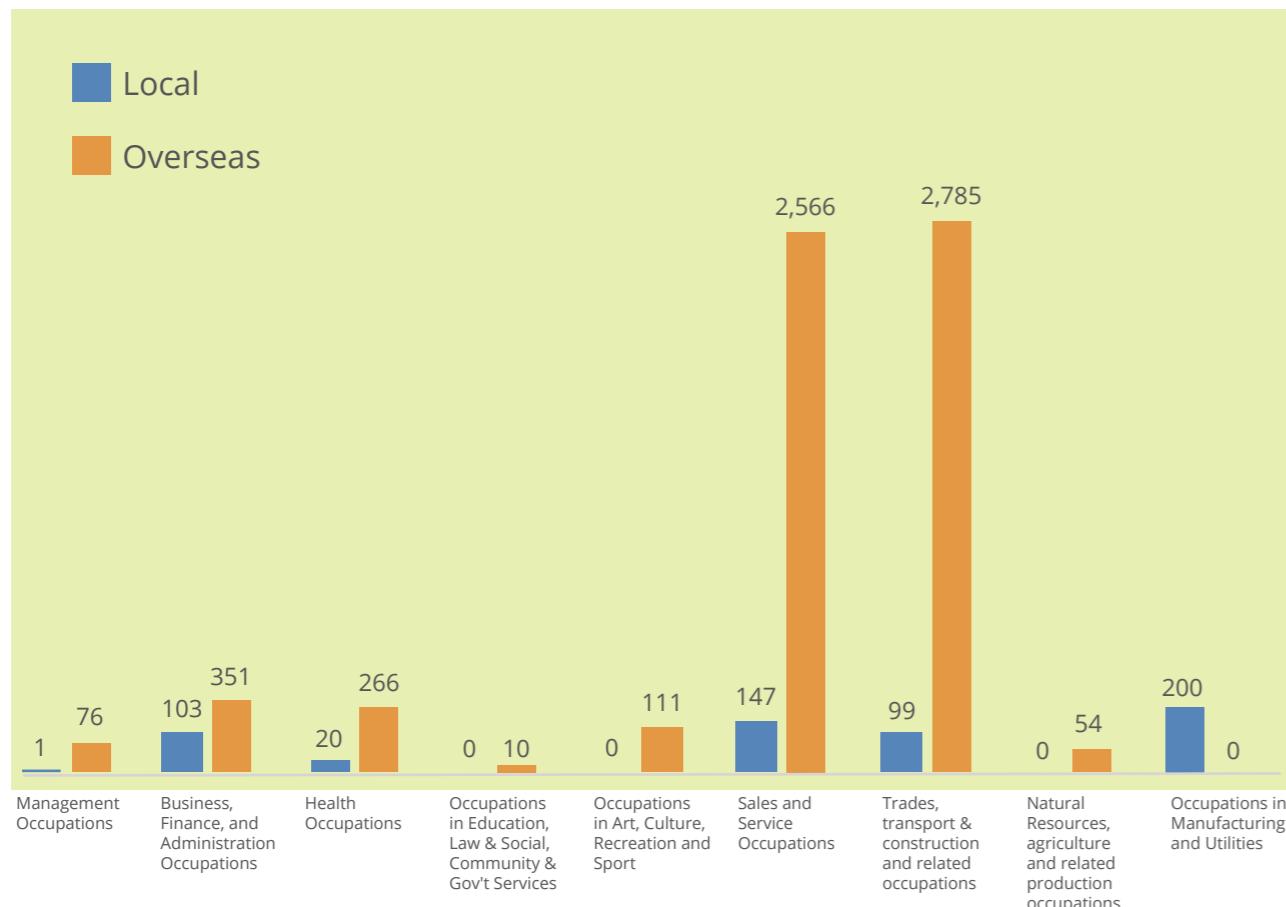

October 2016

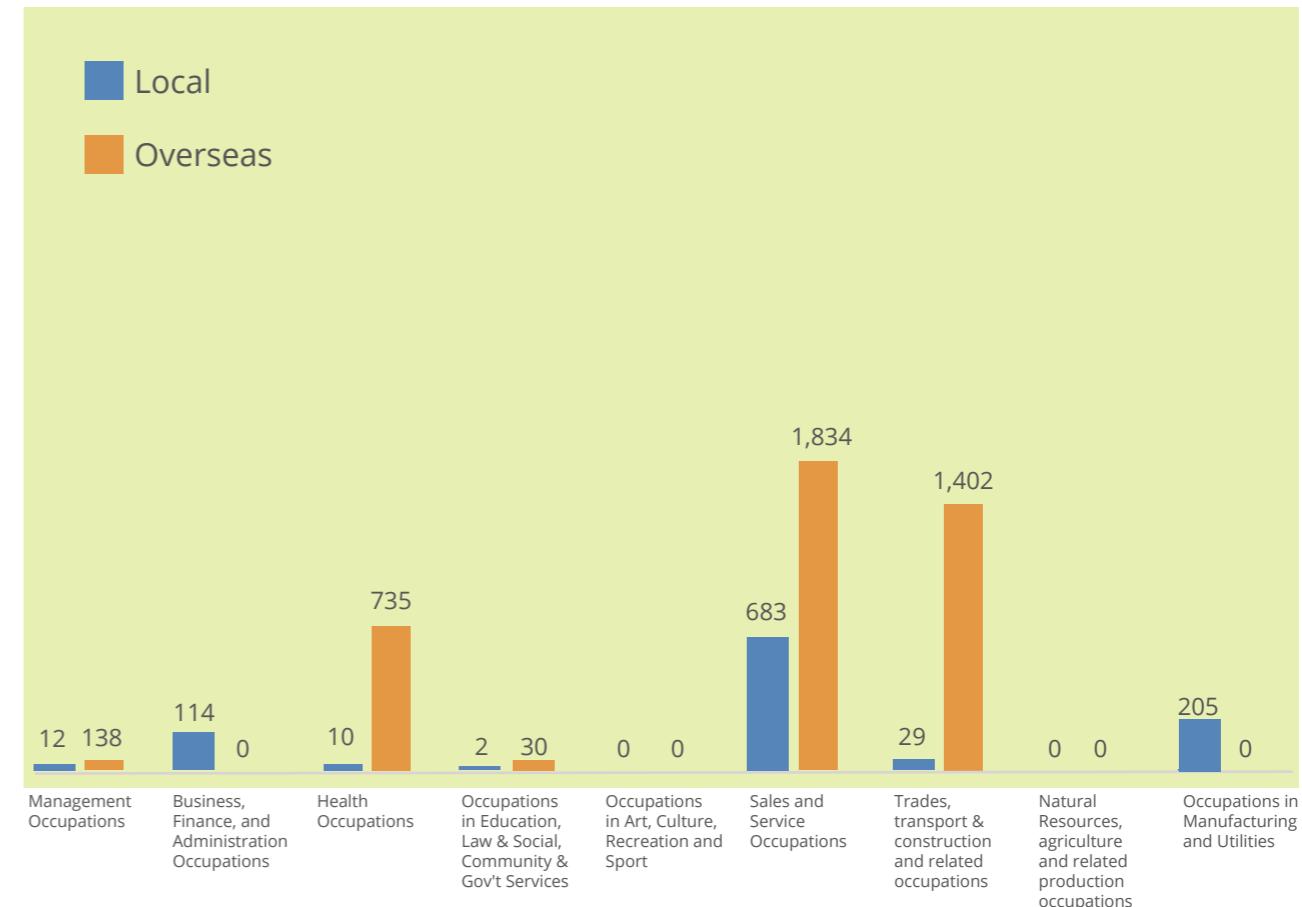

The month of September registered a comparable total number of vacancies with August of more than 10,000. This time sales was still in top but health occupations ranked second. This was still followed by sales and service then trade and transport as usual. There were applicants in education, arts and management both in local and overseas but still they are in the lower ranks. Surprisingly there were no vacancies for manufacturing and utilities.

The month of October registered a comparable total number of vacancies with August and September of more than 10,000. This time sales was still in top followed again by trade and transport. This month health occupations ranked third. There were no applicants in education especially in overseas. This time, classes have already started abroad. Arts and management both in local and overseas registered more vacancies for overseas. Again there were no vacancies for manufacturing and utilities for overseas. Many had been hired in the previous months.

November 2016

December 2016

In the month of November the vacancies decreased in total number by about 40%. This time trade and transport was still in top followed again by sales and services. This month health occupations ranked forth while business and finance rose to rank three.. There were applicants in education especially in overseas registering the lowest. Arts and management registered more vacancies for overseas. Again there were vacancies for manufacturing and utilities for local but not in oversea while arts and culture registered the opposite.

In the month of December, the Christmas month, the ranking went back to the usual with sales in the first rank, folloed by trades and transport, then by health occupations. This would indicate that these thee occupations have the highest demand in local and overseas setting. The vacancies may have decreased a bit. There were no applicants in arts and culture and in agriculture both in local and overseas. Vacancies for management and business registered only local vacancies and none for overseas.
